

Cybrothel/Kokeshi collaboration with Badoink creates new user experience combining VR and haptic technology for multidimensional sexual encounters

Cybrothel's interactive sex doll, Kokeshi, has entered the world of VR porn. Through their collaboration with VR porn leader, Badoink, users can step through the doors of perception into what may be the future of sex as we know it.

In creating a VR cyberspace that echoes Bladerunner and cyberpunk aesthetics, enter the Cybrothel - a futuristic brothel where the object of your desire shifts from a humanoid sex worker to a living breathing woman and back again. She lusts for experiencing human pleasure in all its textures - in Kokeshi's words, she will ask you to meet her in the cyber wet. Part simulation, part real, users are stimulated by both her silicone and human self.

It can be said that erotica is more psychological than physical, and this is the latest in VR technology to operate on both levels. In a search for more sophisticated narratives and storylines, the collaboration is a break from the status quo in the VR porn world. Questions such as how can we experiment with non-humans guiding us into new sexual landscapes? How might the user evolve from inhabiting multiple identities and realities at once?

This is more than a hyper-realistic video game. Imagine the physical sensations of an interactive pleasure doll while indulging in a VR narrative to both tease and seduce your mind and your body. Part escapism, part immersion- the user might shift from wondering if this is real to does it matter?

One thing is for certain. Welcome to the future of sex.